

Squaring Up

Though this wreath couldn't be quicker to craft, do plan ahead—silver tree leaves are native to Australia and will likely need to be special-ordered through your florist

Step

1

Gently strip leaves off one of the branches. You'll need these leaves to create a flat cover over the inner edges of the form.

Step

2

Use floral adhesive to glue leaves along the inside of each of the form's edges, creating two rows so entire surface is covered.

Step

3

Lay a branch of leaves on the top of form so that any bare branch hangs off the end. Use pruning shears to clip off the overhanging branch.

Step

4

Pull back leaves so that branch is visible, then push a U-pin over the top of branch and into the floral foam, securing tightly. Insert at least three U-pins along length of the branch.

Step

5

To cover the second side of form, position another branch that starts at the corner where first branch ended (you'll want leaves to face in a continuing direction all the way around wreath). Pin in place and repeat to cover other two sides of the form.

Step

6

Decide where you want to display your wreath and the length of the ribbon you want to attach. Cut ribbon to size. Loop ribbon around one side of the wreath and tie it in a bow at the top.
